

The river brahmaputra is a major source of livelihood for many people in assam. On a cold foggy morning, a washerman half submerged in the chilly water of the river is seen washing piles of clothes and in the background can be seen a boat with fishermen on it starting their day to catch fish in the river.