

People of the River.

The people of Assam know that "Brahmaputra" is not only a name of one of the river, but it is so much more than that.

"Brahmaputra" is a vital source of livelihood for many people.

They live because of the river.

They live for the river.

They live with the river.

"Brahmaputra" is a transportation medium, connecting thousands of life, and helping people travel and carry out their different means of occupation and livelihood.

"Brahmaputra" is worshipped by many people.

It is worshipped because it is believed to be the Son of Lord Brahma and it is regarded as the One and Only male river in India.

And last but not the least

"Brahmaputra" is an emotion.

It gives each and every person of Assam a sense of feeling that "Yes, I am Assamese. And I am proud of it".

Assam is a riverine state. And it's people live with the river. They are People of the River.
