

As with every river, fishing has been one of the popular sources of income for the families that dwell along the river, but given the size and flow of the mighty Brahmaputra, it is not as extensive as other rivers. My time that I spent at IITG, I got an opportunity to interact with the locals as well as understand the economy of this rural portion of Kamrup District. And given the low opportunity in farming, people actually see river as part of their lives. Some large- and small-scale industries have come up in the last decade or two, but the region hasn't transformed to put it simply.

These are some monochrome images that I clicked during my morning cycling ride over one weekend. I hope people like them!

Pictures from October, 2013

© Vivek Gunawat